The U. V. M.

A compilation of figures made at the University of Vermont shows that since the beginning of the college year September 29, 1915, there have been enrolled 997 students. Of these students 811 or 81 per cent were residents of Vermont. Of this number 346 were students of the summer school. The actual attendance at the summer school was 361, but 15 of these students had been enrolled previously during the year as students in some of the regular departments of the University. The number of summer school students registered from Vermont was 811 or 86 per cent.

When President Benton assumed his duties five years ago, he expressed the hope that the University might have an enrollment of 1000 students. During the past year this number has been approached so closely that his desire may be said to have been fulfilled.
